A Chicken's Life

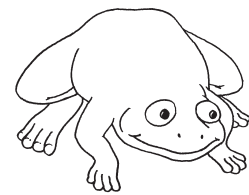

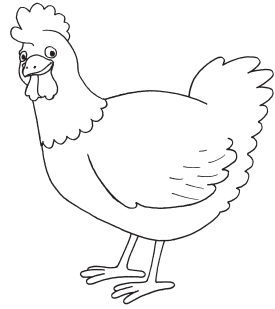

Paragraph Comprehension

Chickens and Frogs

Like a chicken, a frog begins life in an egg. The chicken develops in the egg for twenty-one days. The frog develops in the egg for three to twenty-five days.

When a little chicken or chick hatches from an egg, it has two legs and two wings. When a little frog hatches from an egg, it has no legs. In fact, a little frog looks more like a fish than a frog when it hatches. The little frog will soon develop legs—back legs that are long and strong.

Chickens are white, brown, red, gray, or black and live on farms. Big frogs are green or brown and like to live near lakes or in marshes.

1. What is this story about?
 - This story is about how chickens and frogs develop.
 - This story is about how chickens and frogs play in the rain.
2. Where do chickens and frogs begin life?
